Grads face hard times

College Press Service

Despite an improving economy, college graduates face a mixed job market this spring. More job opportunities may be possible, but expectations for salaries are lower, according to a leading employment report.

"There is widespread anticipation that the new administration and Congress will put programs into place to stimulate the economy," said Victor Lindquist, associate dean and director of placement at Northwestern University in Evanston, ILL. He is the author of the 1993 Northwestern University Lindquist-Endicott Report.

The 47th annual survey of business and industrial firms nationwide found that corporate America is "relatively optimistic," but that the outlook for 1993 graduates is only slightly better than 1992, the worst market for graduates in the past 20 years.

Most of the 258 businesses surveyed are cutting back on recruitment on college campuses and are reducing hiring in several disciplines, including non-engineering graduates.

South Campus parking problems continue

By Jason Bütze
Editor-in-Chief

As most South Campus majors will attest parking has been difficult this semester. In the summer of 1992, the city of Lowell closed the dirt lot across from Durgin Hall. The lot was closed so that it could be developed into a park.

Last semester the administration in an attempt to alleviate the parking crunch began running additional buses from the Research Lot to South Campus. In October they also began a process to lease additional parking spaces for South Campus majors. Since UMass Lowell is a public institution, requests for leases must be submitted through the Division of Capital Planning and Operations (DCPO). After the request is processed through the DCPO, the university must advertise the lease request for three weeks, and open up the request to a bidding process. Therefore the university is unable to directly approach private companies with a proposal. The paperwork was filed with DCPO in October and has as yet not been processed. Thomas Costello, vice-president of Technical Research and Development, blames the delay on understaffing of the agency. Daniel Brosnan who filed the request said "The Proposal will be advertised shortly".

The lease proposal the university submitted to DCPO had several stipulations. The lot had to hold between 50-350 cars, be within 3/4 of a mile of the university, and be in an area that would protect the safety and security of students. Additionally the lot must be paved and have adequate security. The location must be well lit.

In the middle of last semester one of the prospective lots, Vulkor Lot on Broadway St, opened up their lot for student parking at a rate of two dollars per day. The Vulkor Corporation printed and posted flyers around campus stating that

New Add/Drop procedures

By Peter Anton
News Editor

Beginning this semester, students are not required to obtain instructors' or advisors' signatures to add or drop a class. Students can drop classes, and add classes with open spaces at the registrar's office, or at the temporary add/drop table located in South Campus' O'Leary Library on the third floor, above the Media Center. According to Donald Donati of the Registrar's Office, the new process has been a strong success, with hundreds served in the first week of class.

During the first day of class many students took advantage of the ability to quickly add courses. For part of the day, a two hour wait developed at the North campus Registrar's Office. The South Campus add/drop location had much smaller lines, or none at all, as many south campus majors are not aware of the table set up in O'Leary Library. Other students mistakenly believed that North Campus classes could only be added or dropped on North. The South Campus Add/Drop Table can add or drop classes on both campuses, as can the Registrar's Office.

Instructors no longer need to sign add or drop forms, except to add a student into an already full class. In the past, students could only add or drop classes with the signature of a professor. This requirement led to problems, as many students approached professors on the first day of class to sign up for the few spaces remaining. Teachers were required to keep track of their own class rosters for the first ten days of class, and allow students to add when they felt they could. In the new system, teachers are out of the registration process entirely, except in the case of a student who can convince a professor to add into an already full class.

The new process makes registration easier for new and transfer students who have no classes at the semester's beginning, as well as anyone who by mistake, or by not paying school tuition bills on time, had their schedules cleared. In the past, such students had to, by attending as many classes as possible, find four or more teachers to sign the required add/drop forms. Competing against every other student made this impossible for many, considering the difficulty teachers had in keeping track of student rosters. In the new procedure, students can prepare a schedule and sign up for all classes at once at either add/drop location.

The new procedure is not welcomed by all, however. In the past, seniors who needed a class to graduate could usually

Prof. Chen dies in Mexico bus accident

By Ryan Tucker

Dr. Sung Jen Chen of the plastics engineering department died January 3 in a bus crash in Cancun, Mexico.

Also claimed in the accident were his wife, Eileen Chen, 46, and their six year old son Ahn Ahn Chen, whom they adopted in 1987 in Taiwan.

Born in Taiwan in 1940, Dr. Chen received his B.S. from the National Taiwan University. Upon coming to the United States, he earned his M.S. from California Institute of Technology, and later his Ph.D. from Kansas State University.

He was vice president for research and marketing at Kenics Corp. in Danvers from 1970 to 1980, when he joined the faculty at UMass Lowell.

His work as a professor in the plastics engineering department has brought an influx of several million dollars in research grants. His latest work was on programming computers using fuzzy logic for controlling an adaptable plastics mixing system.

The "Write" Place

By Stephen Hare

You've all heard of Centers For Learning and what help it can be. Now a new program has been introduced. For all of you who could never seem to make that perfect paper.

Doug White, who is a recent English graduate of University of Massachusetts Lowell, and is now coordinator of The "Write" Place says "It's a place where we can help the teachers by helping the students, but we're not here to edit (papers)." White, along with Dr. Howard Kaplan the director of The "Write" Place, and Margret Smith the staff assistant, have set up an intimate one on one tutoring center for any students who would like help. Whether it be a senior thesis or a freshman college writing paper.

White wanted to stop rumors that the "Write" Place would write papers for students. He stressed that students are only there for a half hour at a time and need to do their own thinking and their own work. White said "We allow them to read their piece and ask are you happy with that?"

The tutors are made up of higher level English majors. The "write" Place will have offices on North Campus at Southwick 311 and on South Campus at the class facility in the student union basement. Schedules are already available on location, also appointments or questions can be posed by calling 934-2939. The "Write" Place is already up and running and ready for appointment or to just drop by on weekdays from 9-5, and by special appointment on weekends.

persuade a professor to give precedence when choosing whom to add into a class. Underclassmen were expected to be able to take the class at a later date, while the senior stayed in the class to graduate. Now, open spaces are on a first come first serve basis at the add/drop centers. "There are so many other options" for seniors, according to Donald Donati. "There are bubble sheets [in the normal registration process], and seniors are allowed into late registration first." Professors can also add seniors in need of an already full class by signing the add/drop forms still available from the registrar's office, as they did last year.

Vulkor Lot parking

parking would be free at the lot in the Spring semester. Mary Connelly, the Director of Student Activities and Commuter Services, said that the flyers were not printed or authorized by the university. Student use of the Vulkor lot was small and they decided to discontinue the service.

The Vulkor lot on Broadway, has been leased by the Bruce Transportation Group Inc. (BIGI), a New Hampshire based bus company. BIGI decided to move from their current lot on Stevens Street to the Broadway location when they did not seek a special permit from the city. The Lowell Zoning Board of Appeals recently voted to require the company to obtain a special permit because of neighborhood complaints. Neighbors have complained of excessive noise and fumes and say Stevens Street is not wide enough for the buses. Mike Kenyon, manager of BIGI, said "We could have appealed, but we don't want to create any waves with the neighbors."

SGA holds first meeting of the year

By Michelle Ross
News Editor

Welcome back! SGA had its first meeting of the semester this Wednesday and many new, as well as old, topics were discussed. As for old news, the parking situation came up yet again. Last semester, students were able to park in the Vulkor Lot for two dollars a day, in the assumption that this semester the school would have made a deal with the owner of the lot for free parking. But... that's no longer an option because the lot is now being used by the city to park school buses. So we still have a huge parking problem.

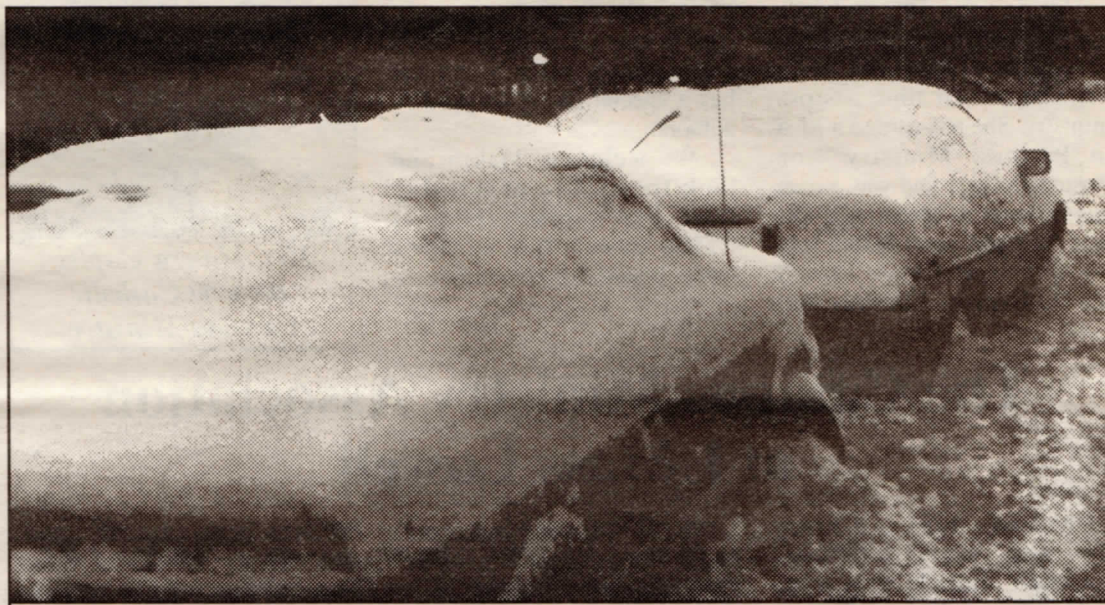

Also, the subject of the bookstore came up. The University is looking into moving the store from Coburn Hall into the McGauvran Student Center. However, that's still pending at the moment. The eventual move would result in the relocating of many administrative offices on south campus.

In the areas of finance: the University is considering building an athletic arena, which would include a hockey rink and recreational facilities to name a few. One suggestion was to tear down the Research Foundation Building but the question of parking may rule that out. Also, the question of how it will be paid for raises some fear because of possible tuition increases. However, the increase is opposed by the members of SGA.

The Student Services Committee will be reaching out to minority students after its next meeting with Kevin Rourke as its new chairperson.

Snow removal crews had to plow around many cars this semester break. Many residents permanently park their cars in the South Campus lots, taking away spaces from commuters. On a typical evening, approximately one sixth of Lovejoy Parking Lot is filled by residents.

Graduates face hard times

ket themselves more effectively and have more flexibility," Lindquist said. "They must realize that their 'dream job' may be in another location or at a level less than desired."

Some other findings of the report include:

- Students with degrees in computer science will find an 18 percent increase in job opportunities.

- Demand for students with master's degrees in accounting will fall nearly 66 percent.

- At the bachelor's level, 47 percent of the firms will need more personnel, but 42 percent will need fewer new employees. For students with master's degrees, 42 percent of the firms will hire more graduates, but 34 percent will hire fewer students.

- A majority of the firms conduct drug tests and many check education and past employment references. Many firms are now using psychological testing.

- Students with degrees in engineering can expect salaries .2 percent higher than 1992 graduates; liberal arts, 1.3 percent higher; and mathematics or statistics, 1 percent higher.

Patrick Scheetz, director of the Collegiate Employment Research Institute at Michigan State University in East Lansing, found in a national survey that employers are projecting a decrease in the hiring of college graduates for the fourth straight year.

The results were reported in Michigan State's 22nd annual national survey, which said the most serious problem facing campus recruiters is the limited number of majority and female job-seekers, and the need for more applicants with work experience. Graduate students also have unrealistic expectations, the report said.

Among the major findings:

- Employers are becoming more selective about their new hires, and some firms won't consider applicants with a grade point average less than 3.0.

- Job availability, while competitive nationwide, is better in the Southeast and North Central, and more competitive in the Southwest, South Central, Northeast and Northwest.

- The qualifications employers are looking for in college students include flexibility, teamwork skills and the ability to provide customer satisfaction. Computer knowledge is considered mandatory, the report said.

- The estimated beginning salaries for 1993 college graduates range from $40,173 for chemical engineers to $19,114 for journalism majors. For students with master's degrees, the average is $35,289, and for Ph.D.'s, $37,755.

College graduates also are competing for jobs with people who have job experience but have been laid off or are switching companies or careers. During the past five years, 240 of the 540 businesses surveyed by Michigan State have lost an estimated 24,454 salaried positions.

"Another factor affecting new graduates is the change in corporate hiring practices," Lindquist said. "Students face more competition from experienced personnel in the job market."

Lindquist estimates that the firms in 1992 hired 55 percent of new employees from people with previous job experience, and 46 percent of the firms now use contract personnel to fill professional positions.

Clarification on recognized Campus Ministries

The Office of University Life has confirmed reports that certain individuals associated with a non-university affiliated religious organizations have been falsely representing themselves as being part of the UMass Lowell Campus Ministries. Because these individuals have been deliberately misleading students, it is important to be on guard and make sure that any group or individual approaching you is being truthful!

While the University does not endorse the religious beliefs of any particular group, we welcome the free expression and investigation of religious beliefs as a Constitutional right. In fact, the only restrictions placed on religious activity are those placed on any other activity in order to insure the right to privacy and prevent harassment.

The University offers two avenues for religious organizations to receive recognition and campus privileges. The first is through recognized student organizations. The second is through becoming part of the UMass Lowell Campus Ministries.

If you have any questions, please call Dean Taylor (x2100).

Native Lowellian is new Catholic campus minister

The Catholic Center team is now complete. Mrs. Maura Caples has joined Fr. Bill Sullivan as the new Catholic campus minister here at UMass Lowell. Maura is a native Lowellian, although she was raised in Lawrence.

Maura spent 18 years working here in Lowell at St. John's Hospital as a pharmacist, before her call to full time pastoral ministry. She has earned a M.A. in Pastoral Ministry from Boston College and was a campus minister at Merrimack College for eight years before joining us here at UMass Lowell. Maura lives in Andover with her husband, Bill, who is an attorney. They have two sons.

Maura is interested in speaking with students about their spiritual journeys, relationships, and women's issues. Maura loves the outdoors, especially walks in the countryside. She has three dogs and is sensitive to the needs of all God's creatures. She loves to read and has a special liking for women authors.

We welcome Maura and look forward to benefitting from her ministry here at UMass Lowell. It is by God's grace, bound to be bountiful.

The Campus Ministry Association at UMass Lowell

Welcome back and happy New Year. Yes, it is 1993 and you have already begun the Spring Term. We, at Campus Ministry, want you to know we are here and ready to serve you in whatever way we can.

There is Religious Life on campus and should be. We neglect the spiritual dimension of our personalities at our own peril.

The Campus Ministry at U. Mass Lowell compliments the overall college experience by providing students with opportunities for worship, retreats, community service and counseling.

Art Brown is the Evangelical Campus Minister and directs Campus Ambassadors. Rev. Imogene Stulken is an ordained Lutheran Minister and represents the several Protestant Churches on campus. Rev. Stulken will sometime this term be taking maternity leave (congratulations Imogene!). Rev. Daniel Koranza, an ordained Anglican priest from Kenya, will fill in for Imogene during her absence.

Mrs. Maura Caples is our newest Catholic Campus Minister and comes to us after several years of experience at Merrimack College. We welcome Maura and are extremely happy that the Catholic Center has a woman minister to complete the team there. Fr. Bill Sullivan is the other Catholic Campus Minister and Director of the Catholic Center. A great burden has been lifted from his shoulders with the addition of Maura as a collaborator in campus ministry.

Although each minister serves the needs of the students in their own faiths, they have a common mission to serve the needs of all students on campus. Religious diversity is a fact of life that is celebrated at U. Mass Lowell and all students are welcome to attend CMA events.

Also, in this issue of the Connector, you will find more specific articles about each of the Campus Ministry efforts - Catholic, Evangelical Protestant and Protestant. We, at CMA, hope we can be of service to you the students and university community at Lowell.

Protestant campus ministry update

To someone seeking to balance school, work, friends, new information, roommates and/or commuting concerns, the University of Massachusetts at Lowell with its diverse campuses can be a confusing, challenging, frustrating, fun, overwhelming, lonely, rewarding, wonderful place to be! Sometimes it helps to know that there are places to go on campus to talk about such feelings and to share experiences. The Protestant Campus Ministry at Lowell provides one such place. The Protestant Ministry is supported by a coalition of local churches and denominations formed to provide a Protestant Christian presence for the UMass Lowell campus.

During the fall and spring semesters, a weekly Protestant service is held on Sunday evenings at 6:00 p.m. The services are held in Fox Hall, Room 301. One of the special features of these services is the sharing that is done conversationally on the Scripture texts and reflection questions for the day. "Coffee Hour" follows the services. Holy Communion is celebrated the first and third Sundays of the month. Beginning in October, a monthly Super Supper is provided by members of local congregations following the worship service of Eucharist the first Sunday of the month.

Monthly newsletters, detailing the next month's special events, are distributed through the UMass-Lowell student mailbox system to over 400 students. "Newsletter folding parties" are held following the service the fourth Sunday of the month.

Additional aspects of the Protestant Campus Ministry program include:

- study series on important faith and life questions;
- retreats and quiet days;
- support groups;
- faculty discussion groups;
- resources for students;
- opportunities for community outreach (such as performing at a local residence for the elderly, collecting food for the Open Pantry, and participating in the annual Good Friday Walk for Hunger);
- participation in peace and justice issues; and
- information for students and parents on destructive religious groups.

The Ministry also offers pastoral care to assist students in crisis.

The Protestant Campus Ministry works closely with university personnel around common interests and shared areas of concern. As a member of the Campus Ministry Association, the Protestant Campus Ministry functions jointly with the other recognized campus ministries to address the needs of the university community. Joint programs include: a Hunger Banquet (part of the annual Oxfam Fast for a World Harvest); religious diversity forums; and interfaith and ecumenical services.

The Protestant campus minister, Pastor Imogene Stulken, works out of an office in Fox hall (across the river from the North Campus), Room 608B. The telephone numbers for the office are (508) 454-0683 (with answering machine) and (508) 934-5014 (with voice message). Office hours are posted.

To all students: Have a super semester!!!

Campus Ambassadors returns!

A year ago, at this time, Campus Ambassadors Christian Fellowship was in danger of just ... fading away. Our membership was down to four fingers and a thumb. But the Lord came to the rescue and sent new members of his body last semester. Now, there are more than you can count on your hands and feet. I guess this means we don't need any more of you. Not! The truth is, we would like to get to know you. If you are interested in fellowship in the Lord's body, worship/bible study, and community service, feel free to contact the Rev. Art Brown at his office, (508)-934-5063, or at his residence, (508)-667-9529, or simply drop by at one of our meetings. Campus Ambassadors meets in Room 617 of Fox Hall, every Thursday night, from 7PM to 8PM (or shortly thereafter).

Announcements! Due to personal reasons, our club President, Adam Blake, will be stepping down from office. Consequently, we will be holding a special election on February 4th to fill this vacated position. Also, for those of you who enjoy Chinese food, this Thursday night's meeting is Chinese night. Tonight, you can look forward to a fine meal, prepared by Hank Daly, who has experience in gourmet cooking. The cost of the dinner is $3.00 per person. It will be an enjoyable evening for all. So I encourage you to come and get to know us better.

You are a unique creation in this world, unless you have an identical twin, and can contribute to this organization in ways nobody else can. That is why we are not some exclusive clique of stuffy English Choir boys. Nor do we smother everyone with hugs and kisses for Mammon's sake. We don't collect dues or tithes, we run on a University budget just like every other club. I could keep talking till I'm blue in the face, but I won't. So, I challenge you to show up at one of our meetings and find out for yourself.

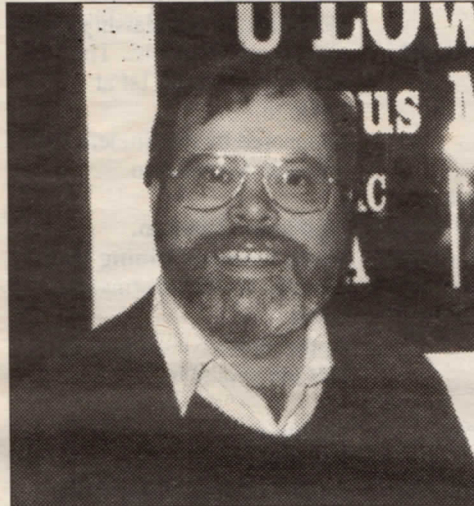

Randall J. Currie
Secretary C.A.C.F.

Evangelical Protestant Campus Ministry and Campus Ambassadors

The Evangelical Protestant Campus Ministry sponsors the Campus Ambassadors Christian Fellowship group at UMass/Lowell. Campus Ambassadors is an interdenominational, University recognized club that meets every Thursday night at 7:00 in Fox 617 for Bible study, Christian fellowship and sharing. In addition, Campus Ambassadors sponsors several social events during the year, which in the past has included road rallies, scavenger hunts, pizza parties, sports nights, hikes and picnics; retreats and a caring outreach to the needy of the area.

The group, which began at Lowell in 1979, is directed by Art Brown, one of Lowell's campus ministers. He is available to any student who needs help dealing with a problem or who would just like to talk. Feel free to call him any time at x5063 or 667-9529.

Contact Art Brown, campus minister, at x5063 or 667-9529.

From the Center

Fr. William Sullivan

"You done me a good turn" said Johnny May Jackson as we struggled to replace the sagging ceiling in her windowless bedroom.

Johnny May lives way out on the Eufola Road halfway between Pittsview, Alabama (which you will not find on many maps) and nowhere (which is not on any map).

Nineteen students from U. Mass Lowell, Sr. Gail, Sr. Grace (who we retrieved from the Philadelphia airport - we were three hours late - on our trek South) and myself journeyed to Alabama during Christmas break for the Catholic Center's annual Outreach Trip. We went to do a little work for some needy folks there. We met God.

God was present in Holy Trinity, Alabama where we slept and ate as guests of the Missionary Servants of the Blessed Trinity. God was present in the Sisters, Brothers, Priest and Lay Volunteers who are spending their lives in service to the abandoned, to those most in need. God was present in the people we served in their poverty, in their faith, in their simple gratitude.

I personally experienced God's presence powerfully in two ways. First, in Sister Zelie who lives among the poor folks there and loves them with the heart of Christ, without judgement, without self-interest. I felt good just being in her presence. The spirit was strong in her. She is a person one loves instantly and one you would rather not be parted from, truly Christ-like qualities.

Secondly, I experienced

God's presence in the students who made this pilgrimage. Each one responded to the opportunity to serve with the grace God gave them from the place they were in their spiritual journey. I experienced God's love and affection in the students I worked with, in their good humor, in their frustration, in their attentiveness to the moment, in their quest for truth, in their openness to the movement of the Spirit in themselves. Their work was spiritualized by their faith. Their love for God and for one another, which they shared with the people they served as best they could, filled my heart with joy, my eyes with tears. Whether they painted houses, cleaned out months or even years of neglect, fixed leaky roofs, widened doors or chopped wood for Winter, they did it with faith and love. Motivated only by the desire to serve their brothers and sisters in Christ.

We were all changed by this experience. We will never be again the people we were before December 28, 1992. We have lived the three great transforming theological virtues of Faith, Hope and Love. In our giving we have received in "good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, will be put into your lap. For the measure you give will be the measure you get back."

To all we served, we say...thank you for allowing us to come into your home, to share your pain, to see your faith. You have done us a "good turn," you surely have.

Welcome back and happy New Year. Yes, it is 1993 and you have already begun the Spring Term. We, at Campus Ministry, want you to know we are here and ready to serve you in whatever way we can. I was born and raised in the central Province of Kenya, in East Africa. I received the early part of my education in rural Kenya before going on to High School close to an urban area, finally went to College in the City of Nairobi. Having been introduced to the Church very early in my life, the real meaning and purpose of the Church did not occur to me until my first two years of High School when I personally committed my life to God through a very memorable conversion experience.

After I graduated from High School, I was not sure what career to pursue, but I later knew that God was calling me to the Ministry of the Church. I joined the East Africa School of Theology and did a Bachelor's degree in Bible and Theology. During my stay in College I enjoyed visiting with students in High School's and College's near and far from Nairobi. Upon my graduation from Bible School, I had the opportunity to serve as the Chaplain of Kam-bui Girls High School in Kiambu, Kenya for two years, after which I joined full time Parish work in the Anglican Diocese of Nairobi. I served in St. Paul's Parish Nairobi south and St. Polycarp Parish, Mlango Kubwa.

In July 1991, I left my country to come to Boston University School of Theology where I have since been, pursuing a Master's degree in Divinity, (Pastoral Psychology).

Currently I am stationed in St. Anne's episcopal Church here in Lowell where I serve as Assisting clergy. I am glad to become part of the chaplaincy team here in the University of Mass at Lowell.

Two New Scholarship Programs Available

Air Force ROTC has two new scholarship programs, the Incentive Scholarship open to students in any academic field, and the Express Scholarship, open only to those studying in specific technical areas.

The Incentive Scholarship offers $1000 per semester to junior and senior AFROTC cadets majoring in any academic field. Sophomores should apply to join AFROTC by February 15 to be considered for next year.

The Express Scholarship Program offers two and three year scholarships covering tuition and fees to students majoring in the following areas: computer science, computer engineering, nursing, math, meteorology, and physical therapy. An environmental engineering concentration in civil engineering also qualifies. Students must be in AFROTC as a Freshman to apply for the three year award and may apply any time during that year. Sophomores may apply for the two year award any time during the year, but early application improves the chances of selection.

Additionally, all junior and senior cadets, as well as all cadets on scholarship receive a $100 per month tax free stipend during the academic year.

Scholarship recipients must be able to meet all Air Force ROTC academic, physical, and commissioning standards, accept a commission as an Air Force officer upon graduation, and serve a minimum of four years on active duty. Starting salary is over $24,000 plus full medical and dental benefits, as well as 30 days vacation per year.

For more information and qualifying criteria, contact Capt. Ward at 934-2252, or stop by Southwick Hall, room 328. There is NO commitment to apply for a scholarship.

SCHOLARSHIP

The Don Gagnon Scholarship is awarded to an outstanding sophomore, junior and senior based on their academics, community service and student involvement.

"Nausea" from Therapy? by Matt Gormley

The A and M debut release "Nausea" from Therapy? teases to the point of aggravation, leaving the listener with a slight earache and improper body tension. The trio from Ireland attempts to glue together a unique sound from many different elements, preventing any coherent link from song to song.

But presented over the airwaves in singles, "Nausea" might catch on and take off. Ska and metal run together in "Deep Sleep," that borrows a little bit from Big Star and Jesus Lizard. "There are too many bands playing tourist music: Bono meets The Pogues in a thatched roof cottage," says guitarist/vocalist Andy Cairns. But can an atypical house be built with all twisted boards? Every lick is predictable or asymmetric, which illustrates the professed influences of Big Black and Ministry. Ironically, the blend of Carl Orf and Helmet mix into a digestible recipe on "Teethgrinder."

"Accelerator" and the title track, "Nausea," achieve cohesion due to the attempts to create something unique. Repetition is emphasized, which usually indicates changes elsewhere in the song. But Therapy? keeps on playing and playing...until they throw something at you.

Bassist Michael Keegan says, "Our music is an alternative to some fourteen year-old acne ridden death metallers singing about slaughtering lambs and painting the blood all over their mothers."

Drummer/vocalist Fyfe Ewing rounds out the Irish trio.

Therapy? is drummer Fyfe Ewing, bassist Michael McKeegan, and Guitarist Andy Cairns.

"It's like being doused in petrol and having an orgasm at the same time," Fyfe explains, "in outer space at zero gravity. You make sense of that, 'cuz I can't."

The original Wija records mini LP "Babyteeth" revealed a different band that needed to tour and find themselves. Somehow, the link between "Babyteeth" and "Nausea" slipped, and then caught. The band recorded only half an album, and half an experiment. The result is "Nausea," and it only half succeeds.

"What a lot of people miss about our music," Cairns points out, "is the sense of humor. Our humor is a release." The multiple facets of Therapy? walk the listener through songs about desolation, guns, broken vans, and hours spent in dentist's waiting rooms.

Despite the shortcomings of "Nausea," Therapy? has a powerful sound that can only mature. If you have a chance, see Therapy? live—they're rumored to be a hot show. "Nausea" as a whole doesn't fly, but the strength of some tracks help it jump off the ground a little.

Techno's Latest Raves? Smart-E's and Intermix

By Dave Muggleston

Who needs a band when you have a computer?

I mean really. There's no need for a real live drummer when you can program a machine to do it much faster and with flawless accuracy. No sense getting blisters on your fingers when you can sample old rock records, digitize and manipulate the sounds to your own tastes.

Combining vast arrays of modern technology to make "music" can result in pitiful top-forty dance music if you're not careful (or if you are—that's where the money is). But add to your electronic beats and high-tech snippets an ungodly fast tempo and gothic sound, and you end up with the latest rage since punk rock.

Call it rave, call it techno, call it intense. "Raves", dances where hundreds gather to groove to the beat, happen legally and illegally on both sides of the Atlantic. And major labels are snapping up rave acts faster than the bands can program their keyboards.

Atlantic Records, loosely disguised as Pyro Tech/Big Beat, has just released "Sesame's Treet", the first record by Romford, England's Smart E's, Famous for their high-speed remake of the "Sesame Street" theme song, Smart E's have created a diverse first effort. Serious, with sampled space program dialog in "Apollo"; humorous, with Muppet effects in "Sesame's Treet"; and musical, with vocalist Jayde contributing to "Loo's Control" and "Make it Happen". "Sesame's Treet" keeps up the tempo and groovy mood that can make rave a happy experience.

On the smaller end of the scale, Roadrunner's Third Mind records is responsible for "Phaze Two", the second album by Intermix. Third mind is devoted to the techno-industrial side of Roadrunner's lineup, and Intermix is a project from techno veterans Bill Leeb and Rhys Fuller.

"Everything is Beautiful" on Ka-Bloom

by Courtney Augusta

If you haven't heard it yet, you might want to keep your ears accessible for the bizarre and captivating debut "Ka-bloom" by "Flowerhead." It takes off with the hit feature "Acid Reign," and follows up with the contagious tune, "Snagglepuss." Sorry folks, I know what you're thinking- But it's not a sixties love and peace jam, but it is everything it implies, and more.

Flowerhead, out of Austin Texas, is beckoning out to all you Seattle, grunge fans. This creative band has been compared to the Smashing Pumpkins, Nirvana, and Jane's Addiction, doing them absolutely no justice. A hint of flavors can be tasted but are brewed into a completely original sound. These Flowerheadmen design a blend of metal and garage undertones injected with a shot of guitar driven psychedelia that has never quite been explored.

Flowerhead, now touring with Ned's Atomic Dustbin, has put some distance between themselves and the smaller venues they played a couple of years back. Previous experiences include the entire audience getting arrested for smoking pot. But this ambitious band continued to play, because beer was their pay, and they were thirsty! Well, there were only two people in the crowd, but the toking blokes were hauled away nonetheless, leaving an empty room. Now their talent will definitely be rewarded with more than a few beers.

The band consists of a variety of musical backgrounds that could only produce such great harmonies. Who would think that bass player/vocalist Eric Faust had twelve years of classical piano training? Those hands were imbedded in notes of Chopin?!? Then we have drummer/vocalist Pete Levine, who attended high school in Iran, and lost his concert virginity to a bad Kiss cover band. Early impressions aren't a big influence in this success, unless Eric Schmitz is still playing his "Josie and the Pussycats" single cut out of an Alpha Bits box.

The three standout tracks, "Everything is Beautiful," "All Along the Way," and "Sunflower," stand out as my personal faves. Flowerhead is breaking through with their brilliant metal-garage rock blend, consisting of feelings about sex, love and hate. Pick this winner up and catch the immediate impact of the melodious perfection achieved. If you do like the album says, and "Play this sucker loud!", you won't be disappointed.

Piece Dogs "Exes for Eyes" by Matt Gormley

The Energy records Piece Dogs release "Exes for Eyes" (x's for i's) runs a marathon of chunky metal with heavy bass and loud guitar.

The Atlanta based quartet of bassist Kyle Sanders, guitarist Mike Grimmett, drummer John Connolly, and vocalist Greg Anderson, worked with producer Alex Perialas to create "Exes for Eyes." The songs reflect the bands work ethic, which persevered. "If you say you can do something, then you can do it, whether you have help or not," says Sanders. "It's the reality of everything around you that helps you achieve your goal. No one helped us out."

The band operated out of a downtown warehouse, throwing parties to draw crowds, developing a big following in the process.

"I think people will relate to what we have to say. Our songs reflect the stuff we see in the streets everyday. The situations may be a little more hard core, but it's the same instances everywhere," states Kyle.

"Devil Dog" is currently the latest new push for metal fans.

Understandably because of the bass and drums, setting the course for Anderson's vocals.

"Morning Sun Burning," does a sprint of guitar and bass riffs, until they reach the bridge and stroll through some changes and solos. "Death Chant" begins with some slow, solemn, melody, until it loses its grip on Anderson's only poor vocal performance on the disc.

"Who's Got It" however, changes gears quickly to accelerate fast through Grimmett's moments at the wheel. His solos burn through and around the bass and vocals as he see fit. Similarly, "Ridin High" takes it's cues from Grimmett, with Anderson singing in a more hardcore style.

After just coming off a promotional tour and video shoot in New York, the Piece Dogs are prepping for a national tour and future video releases. The harsh sound from this southern band has launched the Piece Dogs on a journey to prove their vision. "Exes for Eyes" is a stab at the brass ring, and the future will dictate if the Piece Dogs get the free ride. Check it out.

Macbeth arrives Via Africa by Joe Eubanks

On Saturday November 21, leading black actors from Britain's Royal Shakespeare Company and the Royal National Theatre performed Shakespeare's Macbeth. This particular version is set in modern Africa with the presence of oppression, famine, and violence.

This concept of an Afrocentric Shakespearean production was wonderfully conceived and directed by Stephen Rayne. The idea of an African setting is a brilliant concept because Africa today is still facing economic, political and social instability.

The title role of Macbeth was remarkably played by Hakeem Kae Kazim. He began his career playing Henry V and Othello for the National Youth Theatre of Great Britain. He has just finished filming "Runaway Bay" in Martinique prior to which he toured in the Royal National Theatre's award winning production of King Lear playing Edmund and Richard III. He has also worked extensively with the BBC television and radio.

According Stephen Rayne, Macbeth is a tragedy with no easy answers or solutions. Similarly, Africa is our tragedy for which we must all be held accountable- black or white, rich or poor, African or American, Scottish or English. The African tragedy is happening now.

With the help of economically and politically stable countries such as Japan and the United States, corruption, famine, and health issues will hopefully be improved and we can live in a better world.

Inspired by a growing interest in rap music, Leeb and Fuller wanted to create "the white man's version of gothic funk". Whatever that may mean to Leeb and Fuller, what really it means to you is an uptempo creation based around the latest hip-hop beats. Song titles and themes are irrelevant; there are no lyrics. What is important is the energy created by the epics on "Phaze Two"—driving and unending. Intermix can be interpreted as anger or ecstasy, gloom or glory, but never dull.

Cold Industrial from Will

by Scot Harrison

Industrial fans be wary- Will's new album, "Word-Flesh-Stone," is the next big thing-next to your Skinny Puppy collection, at least.

This new release on Third Mind records is guaranteed to evoke a gothic urgency that surrounds and then devours. For the best effect-shut all your light off.

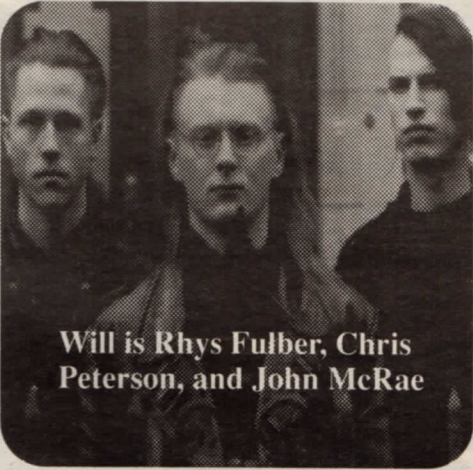

Formed in Vancouver, Canada, by Rhys Fulber and Chris Peterson (both of Front Line Assembly fame), with John McRae, Will is a band over run by a dark age sound that gathers its backbone from Gregorian chants and sinister harpsichord. Add to this a plodding drum rhythm and a cold bass line, and you have a band that will go to great lengths to chill and pierce you.

The instrumental opener, "Furnace Rekindled," sets the album's brooding tone, and is followed by the more dance oriented, "Father Forgive," the greatest strength on the album. Although the vocals appear on only four of the six tracks of "Word-Flesh-Stone," they tend to emphasize the mood of the album, rather than give insight to the thought of it's creators.

Rounded off by the track, "Souls of the Valiant," a strong industrial instrumental, "Word-Flesh-Stone," closes in on the darker side of the alternative sound, and buries it.

Bravo

During the Winter intercession the members of Delta Kappa Phi collected and sorted more than two thousand bags of groceries. They did this in conjunction with the Catholic Charities Food Pantry. According to Brother George Proctor, the director of the pantry, the food collected by Delta Kappa Phi and other individuals helps feed around 3,400 people each month. They also contributed Thanksgiving dinners to the pantry and helped serve food for three days.

To the brothers of Delta Kappa Phi, I extend my most sincere congratulations. Good show!

Too often fraternities do nothing to portray themselves as respectable organizations. They are viewed (sometimes justifiably) as institutions associated with drunkenness, rape and general stupidity.

“But Wait!”, you say, “Surely Jason would not end his editorial in such a fashion. He must want something from us” Well, you’re right.

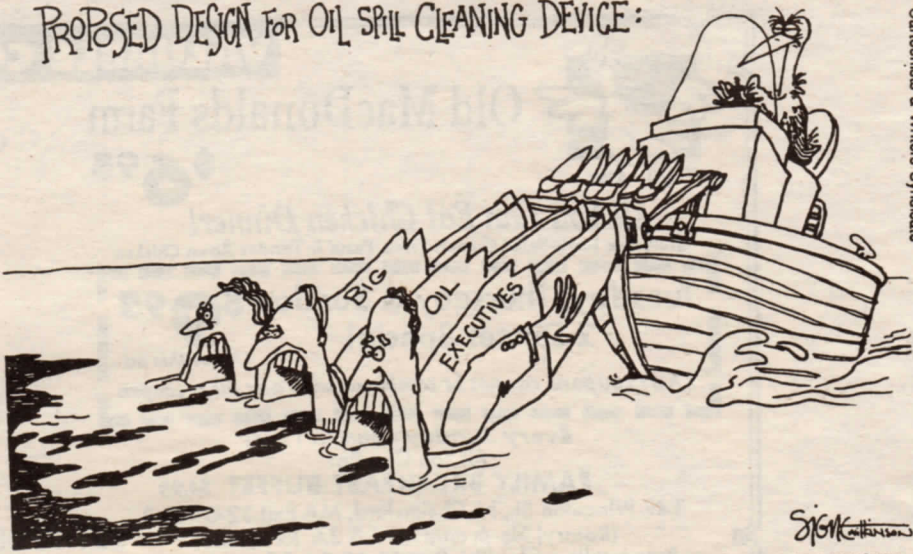

More people should be doing good works like those of Delta Kappa. If you don’t want to do it out of the goodness of your heart then do it for pragmatic reasons.

Our society (indeed our world) is quickly heading into a stratification of people who have and people who have nothing. If this continues the have-nots will eventually rise up. They will have no choice. How can we expect people to sit passively by while they and their children slowly starve?

The Catholic Charities Food Pantry is always looking for volunteers and donations. Call them at 454-9946 or David Cunningham at ext. 6360.

Letters to the Editor

Malcolm X is a masterpiece

As someone who has seen everyone of filmmaker, Spike Lee’s films, I can tell anyone that Malcolm X is a masterpiece and his crowning glory. Within a period of three hours and twenty minutes, Spike Lee gives you as much information and background about this great American figure than any other filmmaker could.

Contrary to Mr. Provencher’s opinion, Spike Lee’s movie has passed the mustard and many of the major movie critics in America say that this biopic is a movie that is appropriate for anybody of any race, sex or age. Spike Lee’s original ideas for Malcolm X the movie had to change do to Warner Bros.

demands. Originally Spike Lee wanted to film a section of his movie in Roxbury and Harvard Square where Malcolm X spent important time in his life. Due to budget constraints, these on site locations had to be re-created. Spike Lee also wanted the movie to be longer in length but Warner execs made it quite clear that he could not exceed three hours by too much time. As complex as figure as Malcolm X was, it seems a very hard or near to impossible task to condense his life into a few hours.

I hope that everyone has the opportunity to see Malcolm X the movie. No matter what the subject matter of a movie is, the moviegoer should always have an open mind and be receptive to new ideas. Unlike Mr. Provencher, I went into Malcolm X with an open mind and I like others enjoyed every minute of the movie and I wished it was longer. I highly recommend that everyone reads the Autobiography of Malcolm X with Alex Haley because many important parts of Malcolm X life could not be included in the movie.

If one both sees the movie and reads the book, one would have a great idea of Malcolm X’s frustrations and concerns about freedom, justice, and equality for all people.

An African American perspective on Black History Month

Black History is celebrated in February. to African Americans, Black History Month is a commemoration to honor those African Americans who were not afraid to make a stance in order for change economically, politically and socially. Some of these people gave their lives in hopes of making this country treat everyone as they were whole people and not three-fifths of a man.

Black History Month does not mean the same to all people. To me, Black History should be celebrated every month. African Americans still have such a long way to go in this society to achieve equality. Our leaders were all prosecuted for wanting change. The society that we live in today give people of color enough, so “that they won’t complain and never enough to get ahead.” to me, that is our society as it exists today.

Black History Month to me, is a celebration of leaders in the past and in the present. It is celebrated through music, literature, dance, exhibits and much more.

This month should be a month of awakening. The African American community needs to look where our people stand in the economic, political an social arena of this country and get involved in these areas. It’s been twenty five years since we had a strong black voice opting for changes so that we can have equal opportunities. We should take this month not only to celebrate but to gather as a group and find time and ways to help our community. Our community is deteriorating at our very hands. We are killing ourselves my brothers and sisters.

We are so close to embarking the year 2000 and to me it seems as if our progression is very stagnant. We have a little here, economically, a little there, politically, and a handful socially. African Americans, we need to sit back and take a look at our community. If we don’t improve our surroundings first, then trying to walk up the ladder to take another step seems impossible.

Take the month of February to celebrate those who gave me the opportunity to write this letter and we also need to exert our energy and ideas in ways that will enable me the opportunity to further advance.

Nominations open for honorary degree

Attention students, faculty and other members of the University community. UMASS Lowell annually awards the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters during commencement exercises to individuals who have made significant contributions to the business, cultural, educational, industrial, moral, social, intellectual, or physical welfare of society. Besides saying something about an individual who is the recipient of an honorary degree, the award of such an honor says a great deal about the awarding institution and its values. Past recipients include Gloria Steinem, Arthur Fiedler, John Updike, Dr. Barbara Nichols, and Eleanor Holmes Norton.

Administrative Announcement #14 invites you to nominate candidates whom you feel best exemplify the above qualities. Nomination forms are available in the offices of University Life, Academic Affairs, and in the student mailrooms. OF THE WILD!

AUDITIONS & INTERVIEWS

Thursday, February 4
& Friday, February 5, 9am-6pm
The Hyatt Regency Cambridge
575 Memorial Drive, Cambridge

And some of the stars here are even bigger — in talent! At Busch Gardens you'll find a team of truly outstanding singers, dancers, musicians, comic actors and variety performers. Even our technical personnel are first rate. Be part of a team that's big on talent, and an atmosphere that's serious show business, but a lot of fun.

Singers

Prepare a musical selection in your most comfortable range. Be prepared to present a second selection of a different style and tempo should it be requested. Bring sheet music or instrumental background cassette in your best key. Accompanist and cassette recorder provided. Singers should be prepared to dance.

Dancers

Arrive in appropriate dance clothes at 11:00 a.m. or 3:30 p.m., and we'll provide the choreography. Should you be unable to audition at these times, come prepared with a choreographed dance routine indicative of your most proficient styles. You may also be asked for a second style demonstrating your versatility. Bring appropriate shoes and any props required for your specific dance styles. Accompanist and cassette recorder provided. Dancers should be prepared to sing.

Musicians

Prepare a selection on your most proficient instrument. Bring doubles (if any) and be prepared to play them if requested. You may be asked to sight-read and play a variety of chord progressions and/or scales. No instruments or amplifiers are supplied at the audition site.

Comic Actors

Have a 1-2 minute comic monologue prepared, which involves big physicality and characterization. Improvisations may be requested. Ethnic dialects are helpful and may also be requested.

Variety Performers

Magicians, jugglers, Mimes and More. Prepare a short routine demonstrating your talents as a strolling street performer. Give us your best three minutes.

Technical Personnel

Applicants for sound operators, lighting and follow shot operators, stage hands and stage managers should bring a typed resume of related technical experience and two letters of recommendation. A personal interview will be conducted at the scheduled site.

Seamstresses & Dressers

Bring a typed resume of related costume experience. Of particular interest is ability in pattern drafting, fitting, tailoring, alterations and costume construction.

Howdy Folks.

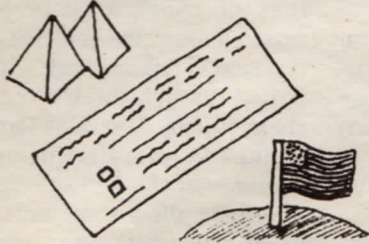

I've been sick. I haven't been able to prepare the type of comic page I wish to present. I could always use submissions. OH PLEEEEEEZE gimme cartoons!!! I'll Be your best friend! No that won't work. I know. If you are capable of drawing cartoons and I find out about it, I'll shoot you if you don't submit stuff. Here's a person who thought I was kidding.

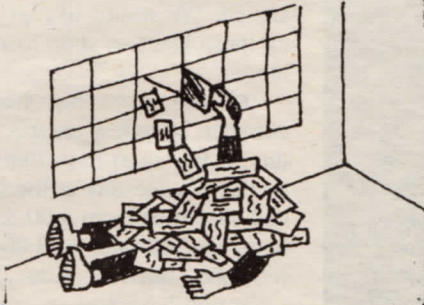

THE BEST POLICY

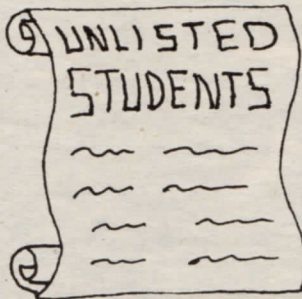

First, there was the construction of the pyramids. Then, man walked on the moon. Now comes the "Disclosure Prevention" form!

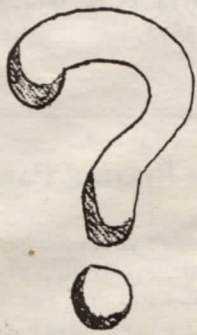

If it's not sent in by Monday, then your name goes on a list and you'll start getting junk mail from everywhere.

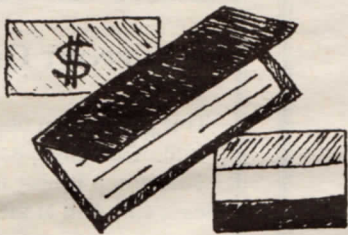

So turn them in so your name can go on a list and ...err...

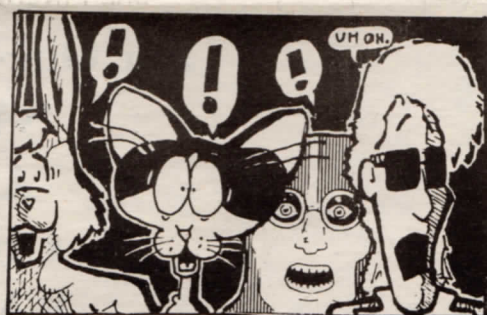

Does this make any sense to you?

Actually, write down your name, social security number, creditcard number with expiration dates, as well as any other important information.

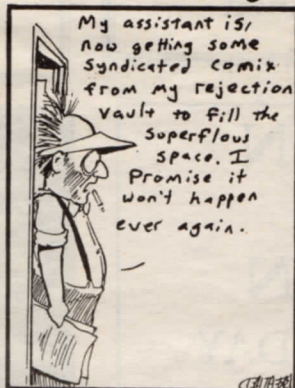

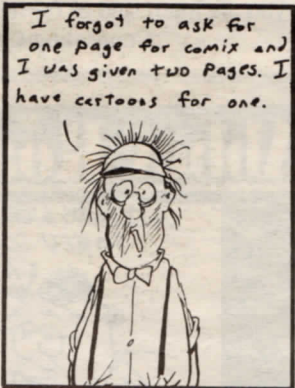

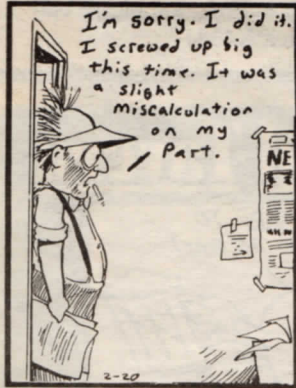

And send them to me!

Men's Basketball Signs Three to Letter of Intent

Lowell - University of Massachusetts Lowell Men's Basketball coach Gary Manchel announced that three prospective student-athletes have signed national letters of intent during the early signing period and will be attending UMass Lowell in September, 1993.

Manchel, who is in his first season as the Chiefs' head coach, announced that Mark Davis, a 6-5 forward out of Hillcrest High School in Jamaica, Queens, New York, N.Y.; Brent Oakleaf, a 6-7 forward at Genesee Community College in Batavia, N.Y.; and Jarvis Murray, a 6-7 center at Schoolcraft College in Detroit, Michigan have signed national letters of intent and accepted scholarship offers to attend UMass Lowell beginning in September, 1993.

"All three are very athletic, hard-nosed defensive players," commented Manchel. "They all fit into the way I want our team to play - up tempo and pressure defense. They will help fill the void left by our four graduating frontcourt players."

Manchel described Davis as a very strong rebounder and great defender who is just scratching the surface of his abilities. Davis averaged 18 points, 11 rebounds and 3 blocked shots per game as a junior last season playing for coach Ken Gershon.

Oakleaf, a resident of Newark, N.Y., is a very skilled player who can shoot the three-pointer, pass, and should be an impact player for the Chiefs' team the first time he steps on the floor next year according to Manchel. Through seven games this season playing for Bill Van Gundy at Genesee CC, Oakleaf is averaging 15.6 points and 9.7 rebounds.

Murray, a resident of Detroit, Mich., is a raw athlete who had some Division One schools looking at him and Manchel feels very fortunate to get him. Only 19 years of age, he will have two years of eligibility at UML. Through eight games this season, Murray has averaged 18.5 points, 9 rebounds and 2 blocked shots playing for coach Dave Bogataj.

WJUL will broadcast hockey this Friday when the Chiefs host Boston University. Game time is at 7:00pm.

Shane Henry Named Hockey East Player of The Month-November 1992

Junior left wing Shane Henry (Langley BC) of the University of Massachusetts Lowell has been named HOCKEY EAST Player of the Month for November, 1992, as selected by league administrators.

In the month of November, Henry had five multiple-point games and was named First Star in three of the six games in which stars were named. In eight games played, he scored eight goals and seven assists for 15 points, including two power play goals and three game winners. He contributed 1.875 points per game to the Chiefs and was also named Player of the Week in the league for the week of November 8.

Overall, Henry had 10 goals and 12 assists for 22 points in 13 games played, with three power play goals and four game winners. In league play, he had one penalty for two minutes and two penalties for four minutes overall.

"We are very pleased with Shane's year thus far," said Assistant Coach Mark Ostapina. "He is highly skilled with great speed and sees the game extremely well. He has become a take-charge guy this year and forces the opponent defense with his ability to go to the net. He just does all of the little things right as well."
